

Fig-1

(b) Economic Components :

- Creation for new markets & opportunities for sale growth
- Cost reduction through efficiency and improvements
- Creation of additional value.

(c) Environmental Components :

- Reduce waste, effluent generation, emission into environment
- Use of renewable raw material
- Elimination of toxic substances.

The human component in sustainable development has a major role because the concept of equity in corporate social responsibility in regards of sustainable evolution of human society. Analysis of components of sustainable development shows that the economic potential of sustainable development is changing very slowly, while the socio-economic development changes very quickly.